

ABSTRACT

The invention disclosed relates to laminated polymer composite material comprising, a base structural member having at least one major surface and an overlay layer of polymer linked, e.g by fusion bonding, to at least a portion of said at least one major surface of the structural member, wherein the polymer is any polymer which can be thermally activated to obtain chemical and/or physical links with the structural member, and to a process and apparatus for making same.